Behaviour Policy

- Our behaviour policy focuses on children's intrinsic motivation rather than extrinsic rewards such as traffic light systems. Outstanding behaviour is recognised and behaviour which does not meet the standard required is dealt with through fair consequences.

- Children should strive to follow the attributes of the 'Broughton Learner'. These are displayed in the classrooms and are often referred to. A 'Broughton Learner' perseveres with learning, embraces challenge, learns with others and takes responsibility for their own learning. If any child displays attributes of our Broughton Learner they are rewarded through house points, these are then collated across school and celebrated during worship on Fridays.

- At Broughton, we acknowledge the importance of the Christian Values and recognise that these should thread through our daily lives. Our behaviour policy helps our children to understand how they can achieve the Christian Values in their everyday lives. Showing the Christian Values could lead to spontaneous rewards such as stickers, however, there is no obligation that each child receives one. This will keep the importance of the meaning behind the values.

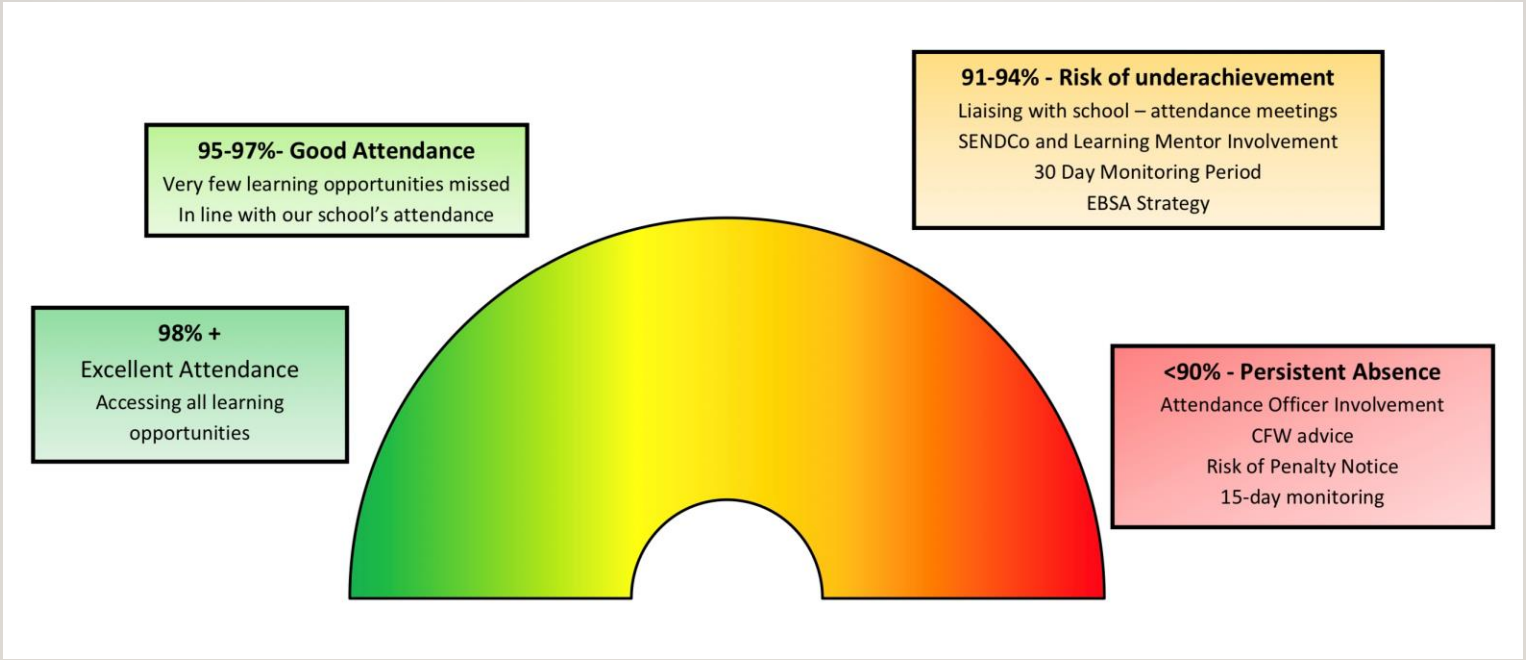

- At Broughton staff have adopted the establish, maintain, restore approach to behaviour. Most importantly the restore strategy ensures that the teacher and child intentionally repair harm to their relationship after a negative interaction, therefore reconnecting. This approach ensures that children take responsibility for their actions and the behaviour is unpicked by an adult to try and understand the cause through mutual problem solving.

- Positive comments or targets will be written on marked work and home-school diaries will be used to reinforce good learning strategies or techniques. Where appropriate, communication via home-school diaries will be used to give children and parents positive feedback and encourage home/school liaison.

- Postcards will be sent home occasionally to celebrate individual successes or when targets have been met. The comments on these will relate specifically to the child's merits rather than a blanket 'well done' comment.

- We have one rule: Be kind
